Iran Human Rights Monitor - Monthly Report May 2018

Introduction

May 2018 was marked by diverse cases of human rights abuse. This includes at least 16 executions, five flogging sentences issued by the judiciary, 17 cases of arbitrary murders, increased pressure on prisoners, beating street vendors and destroying people's houses by the municipality agents, cutting an elementary girl's hair for mal-veiling, and crackdown on nationwide peaceful protests staged by different social sectors.

One of the most important developments in the month of May was demonstrations in the southern city of Kazerun, against a plan to divide the city. The peaceful protests turned deadly on May 16, when the Iranian regime's security forces opened fire on protesters.

Iran Human Rights Monitor has learned that at least four protesters were shot dead, several injured and many arrests. They were identified as Omid Yousefian, Ali Mohammadian Azad, Reza Azhdari and Mehdi Jahantab. Ali Al-Ghasi Mehr, the head of Fars province's judiciary admitted two deaths and 48 wounded. (The state-run Tasnim news agency- May 19, 2018)

Numerous video clips from inside Kazerun show plainclothes agents shooting protesters from the judiciary building rooftop. Other videos, vividly depict the large number of security forces dispatched by authorities from nearby cities such as Shiraz, and even Tehran, to quell the protests.

As the protests continued, the Interior Ministry issued an official statement reiterating that it will "decisively deal with those elements who might have other goals in disrupting the order and social security." (The state-run ISNA news agency- May 17, 2018)

Javad Norouzi took part in Kazerun protests. The state forces beat him, broke his nose, caused bleeding in his eyes & tore his lip.

In a call she said: "I have been freed on bail of 400 million tomans, provided by a nice woman since three months ago until the end of Ramadan so that I can provide the ransom money...unfortunately no hard I tried I couldn't collect the money demanded." She was arrested in 2001 charged with the murder of her husband. She is now 55.

Prisons

The high number of prisoners is just one of the consequences of 40 years of the regime's destructive policies. The state-run Jamaran Website reported on May 16, 2018, that 52 persons are imprisoned every hour. Hassan Moussavi Chelak, the head of Iran Social Aids Association, recently said that 459,666 inmates have been added to the prisons' population in 2017, "this means that 52 persons have been entering prisons every hour." Before that he had cited that increase in number of prisoners is a sign of "deteriorating moral values". He has said: "15 million judicial files show weakness of social morale in Iran."

Nevertheless, this figure must be considered as minimum due to lack of transparency of official sources disseminating the information on the arrests.

At'hareh Nejadi, President's deputy in programing and coordinating women and family affairs said: "Based on visits we had from country's prison(s), women are not under proper conditions in jails. Unfortunately, mothers who have committed unintentional crimes are in jail with their small children. Children who only remember life as inside the prison walls..."

About the average age of women according to her visits she said: "By the existing information, the average age was between 17 and 37. Of course there were also elderly women too." (The state-run IRNA news agency- May 5, 2018)

Asqar Jahangir, the head of Prisons Organization said: "We have about 18,000 prisoners related to financial crimes who are jailed for unintentional crimes. These inmates have financial convictions like they have written promissory notes or have been a surety and not being able to pay the money.

He added: "Also there are inmates who have had accidents in their workshops, written a NSF check, and not paid the alimony or dowry. The number of dowry cases are very high... "We have 3000 prisoners because of dowry from which 466 cases can be freed by paying less than 10 gold coins but because they cannot pay it, they are still in jail," he said. (The state-run ISNA news agency- May 17, 2018)

Asqar Jahangir pointed at the result of a questionnaire and said: "73% of prisoners have said that poverty is the reason for their imprisonment". "43% of prisoners are illiterate and suffer from cultural poverty. 17% of them are jailed for dangerous behaviors," he added. (The state-run Mehr news agency- May 22, 2018)

Mohammad Ali Qhasedi, the head justice for Ardebil Province (in northwest of Iran) said: "Currently the province's jails confine 770 prisoners sentenced for financial crimes. From this number 245 are there for not paying dowry, 78 for not paying alimony and 436 for other issues". "Unfortunately the number of financial convicts are more and there are 35,000 of them whose files are under scrutiny in different judicial systems," he cited. (The state-run ILNA news agency- May 23, 2018)

Persecution of religious minorities

- Hadi Salehi, a Sunni prisoner at Saghez Prison (northeast of Iran) was exiled. Faez Choopani the other Sunni prisoner of this prison was also exiled to city of Baneh. Hadi Salehi will serve 23 years and Faez Choopani six years. The Iranian regime has accused them of "acting against the national security" but these prisoners emphasized that they have just advertised for their religious beliefs.

- Yaresan women are held in deplorable conditions in the Qarchak Prison in Varamin, recently published reports from Iran say. Sepideh Moradi, Sima Entesari, Shima Entessari, Avisha Jalaeddin, Shokoufeh Yadollahi, Maryam Farsiani, Nazill Noori, Maryam Barakouhi, Elham Ahmadi and Sedigheh Safabakht have been detained since February 20, 2018, in Qarchak Prison under inhuman conditions. Ms. Sepideh Moradi suffered injuries in the hand, elbow and fingers while being arrested during the Yaresan protest in Tehran. Her legs got burnt due to security forces' use of tear gas, the scars of which still remain after three months. Ms. Moradi has been denied medical care. At the same time, these women are under pressure for their weekly visitations. Ms. Avisha Jalaeddin was deprived of visiting her young son. Prison authorities hardly accept the items provided for these women by their families and they are forced to buy their needed items at prices two to three times higher from the prison's store.

- On Friday, May 11, 2018, Mehرداد Heyrani, a Baha'i citizen residing in Tehran was arrested and transferred to an unknown location by intelligence agents after his residence was searched and his personal belongings such as computer and religious books were confiscated. Announcing this news, an informed source said: "Mr. Heyrani was first arrested in his friend's house in Fardis (neighborhood) in city of Karaj by intelligence agents and was then taken to his home. While searching the house they confiscated his personal belongings including religious books and computer... and then he was transferred to an unknown location."

Basic rights

Two members of the Iranian regime's so-called parliament have recently raised alarm bells regarding food shortages in four of the country's provinces. 75 percent of Sistan & Baluchistan Province in southeast Iran are living in poverty, especially food shortages. (The state-run ILNA news agency – May 27, 2018)

"Sistan & Baluchistan Province ranks as the worst such province, followed by Hormozgan, Bushehr and South Khorasan," according to Mohammad Amini Fard, a representative from Sistan & Baluchistan in the regime's parliament.

"Sistan & Baluchistan Province ranks very low regarding development and unjust wealth distribution, and unfortunately due to the lack of natural resources and an 18-year drought, the province is facing an enormous food shortage. This is why villagers have migrated to the outskirts of cities such as Zabol, Zahedan and Chabahar," he said.

University studies show the provincial population's is lower in height and weight in comparison to the country's averages, Amini Fard continued.

Alim Yar Mohammadi, a parliament member from Zahedan, highlighted the grave circumstances of 75 percent of the province's population grasping with food poverty.

"The people of this province's villages don't have adequate drinking water or even bread. By any standards they are living in very poor conditions," he said.

"This province is home to all kinds of illnesses and this cannot be denied. Even in the city of Zahedan more than 350,000 people lack adequate running water and water trucks provide for many parts of the city," Mohammadi added.

"When the people of this province don't enjoy adequate food supplies, it is highly likely people will start eating the meat of animals such as cats and crows. Various villages in the south near Chabahar are witnessing far worse conditions," he continued.

The debate over the livelihoods of the people in this province was followed after a few days ago when Hassan Shamshadi, a journalist of IRIB with a post on his Instagram page, published a photo mentioning: "What you see here is the food of a family. What do you think the food they are eating? contents? This family and many other families are eating cat's meat."
